FARMERS AND AUTOMOBILES.

Charlotte Observer.

"Long years ago," reminisces the Whiteville News-Reporter, "when it was proposed to do some needed work on a road in a certain township in Columbus county strong opposition was raised. It was claimed that only a few rich men and the preacher had buggies and they wanted to make poor folks work roads for them to drive over. Today the children and grandchildnen of those kickers all own top-buggies. History is now repeating itself in the opposition to motor cars. To propose to build a great highway through our county over which automobiles may travel is like waving a red rag before a mad bull. You are met with the same old arguments which were advanced against working a road over which buggies

Another factor will aid the tendency in this dierction. When the bicycle craze was at its height an enormous amount of capital was attracted to investments in the manufacture. When the craze waned, desperate efforts were made to increase the field of demand, with but very partial success. Similarly the popularity of the automobile has caused factories turning out excellent machines to spring up here, there and everywhere and the aggregate of the output is so large that the demand occasioned by those purchasing for luxury will not by any means consume it. A demand based on utility must be created or many of the factories will go to the wall. One of the most inviting fields in which such a demand could be produced is among the farmers, and this the manufacturers are realizing. The next few years will witness an advertising campaign which will extend in every direction, limted only by the existence of practicable roads. We do not think that the News-Reporter exaggerates unduly in predicting that the machine's will be as common in some rura! districts ten years hence as bugrgies are today.
